Movie Art Censor Needed

The quick sequence of events necessary to tell a story in twenty minutes often requires that love at sight shall ripen into an engagement in sixty feet of film. The only way so far discovered by most directors to indicate this pleasing result is thru the symbol of the engagement ring. Every actor must carry a pocketful of these in different sizes, so as to be ready for any emergency.

If the handsome cowboy in the leather panties meets the girl from Gotham for the first time in the middle of the desert and strolls up the wash to make moving picture love to her, he must be ready on returning close to the camera to slip on her finger a ring that fits. This saves much talk, a trip to the jeweler and other claptrap of real life. The sickroom death scene, with slight variations, is pictured thus: The doctor and the family are on the far side of the bed, which is set in a stage tableau depicting tense anxiety. The sick mother, lying well downstage, rises from her pillow, stares vacantly into the Great Beyond, clutches frantically at her beads and, with several fine convulsions, expires. The doctor now takes her limp hand, looks long and thoughtfully at the departed, and then, slowly raising his eyes to the chief loser, mournfully shakes his head. She sighs heavily and, turning to the next mourner, shakes her head; the next one does the same to his neighbor-and so on down the line to the last servant. When they have all shaken their heads one feels sure that Annie's mother has passed on: but, lest there should be some mental defective among the spectators who has not understood, the doctor closes Annie's mother's eyes and pulls the sheet over her head. This clinches the fact that death has come.

We of the moving pictures have all kinds of censorship in the interest of the morals of messenger boys; but as yet there has been no official as the doors permit. protector of poor, old, defenseless art from the criminal ravages of the dramatic plumbers. However, the higher censorship of public patronage is beginning to assert Itself, and the great success of some of the really fine productions is a most hopeful house of which the boarded part is sign. The average spectator is not 10 feet across in front should have so low browed as the old time director thought, or else the crowd has sion of four of these lofts would make improved immeasurably in the past a building 40 feet long and 12 feet few years. The estiate of indiscriminating ignorance is fast going the way of the dear old fiction which says the moving pictures are patronized only by children.-Rob Wagner in the Saturday Evening Post.

BUILDING FOR PIGEONS

Small Unused Structure Is Good Enough to Start With.

Beginner Should Have Lofts in Readiness Before Buying His Breeders-Cheap Fly House Outside is Also Necessary.

Before buying breeders, the beginher should have his lofts in readiness. A position facing south is always best as then the interior will be flooded with sunshine all hours of the day, and every corner will be penetrated with light, and so kept purified, and the birds will be in the best possible condition. As a general thing a single story house is best, with the floor one foot or more from the ground. The house should have a pitch roof with the higher side for the front. Windows should be made in front only, as all the available space at the back and sides will be needed for the nests. A proportion which has almost come to be the standard among those who breed pigeons for squab raising is nine feet in front with a drop of three feet to the back and about ten feet wide inside; the depth may be somewhat greater than the width. A succession of these lofts may be built as the business progresses, or they may be put up at the same time. The partitions between the lofts are of boards or of wire netting, as may be preferred.

Cheap Fly House for Pigeons.

There should be doors leading from one loft to the other with nests up the back and around the sides as far

An aviary or fly of wire outside is necessary to the completion of the accommodations for the pigeons that are to be kept by the breeder. The fly should be larger than the loft itself. It should be the same height as the house and twice as long. That is, a the wire fly 20 feet long. A succeswide.

The nests for the pigeons are arranged along the back and side walls. They should run from 12 inches from the floor to within the same distance from the roof, and be a little more than three feet wide, so as to divide the back space of ten feet into three equal parts. Be careful not to overcrowd, as it requires skill to handle a large number of pigeons in one loft successfully.

Each compartment should be fixed in such a way that one end can be darkened, and the nest should be placed at this side. It will be found best to use the earthen nest pans Vice Charged to Mosquitoes that can be bought from dealers in "Those who complain of mosqui- pigeon supplies, and these should be toes here ought to be thankful that supplied with material like shavings, suitable for the birds to rest upon.

When breeding for profit it is very expense. A building such as that described can be put up of plain match boards at the lowest cost possible; if more money is to be spent on the building itself, it may be papered and clapboarded, which might be better dealer is two dollars per pair, and it does not pay to begin with poor stock. Economize in your building and general equipment if necessary, but get good birds, if you want to be sure of profitable results, and be sure that

How Catarrh is Contracted Mothers are sometimes so thoughtless as to neglect the colds which their children contract. The inflammation of the mucus membrane, at first acute, becomes chronic and the child has chronic catarrh, a disease that is seldom cured and that may prove a life's burden. Many persons who have this loathsome disease will remember baving had frequent colds at the time it was contracted.
